South Africa exchanged a Soviet spy for eight "very important" Western intelligence agents and a South African soldier held in Marxist-ruled Angola, Prime Minister Botha told parliament. The swap at an undisclosed location involved a KGB agent identified as Maj. Alexei Koslov.

An accused Hungarian spy, Otto Atilla Gilbert, pleaded innocent at his arraignment in Augusta, Ga., on charges of paying an Army warrant officer cooperating with the FBI $4,000 for military secrets. The soldier had told officials he was approached during a family visit to Budapest.
